Expert View | Govind Sankaranarayanan Co-founder & COO, Ecofy

“The upcoming policy decision by the RBI is likely to reflect a balanced approach as it is going to continue managing inflation while supporting economic growth. The MPC is likely to remain cautious in its upcoming policy decision, closely tracking both domestic inflation trends and global economic signals before making any rate decisions.

For the green financing ecosystem, policy stability is critical. A predictable interest rate environment enables financial institutions to assess credit demand with greater clarity, channel capital into sustainable projects, and build confidence in climate-focused lending portfolios. Clear forward guidance that sustains liquidity and strengthens credit flow towards sectors such as green mobility and rooftop solar will serve as a strong catalyst for long-term growth.”
